FROM THE HOME FRONT
TALES OF THE SAFE HAVEN KITTIES
WEEK 266: A VERY SPECIAL PAIR
NOTEWORTHY NEWS FROM WILLS

How you doin'?

We had a good week—four of our kitties went home. Three of them left the building on Saturday, and when you get to the end of my column, you'll have a clue as to how busy our Saturday was! Charlee, a cute little girl who wasn't here at the shelter very long at all, was the first to leave the building. Then Mochi and Moosey went home together. And I'm sure if it hadn't been so busy, Wilbur would have left the same day. However, his adopter, aka my assistant, had a few things to do, so Wilbur went home with her this afternoon. And here's all their photos:

Last column I told you just a little 'bout Bo and Tina Faye, but 'cause I was writing all 'bout the event I didn't give them the space and attention they really deserve. So I'm gonna fix that right now. (You knew I would, didn't you? I'm good at fixing things!)

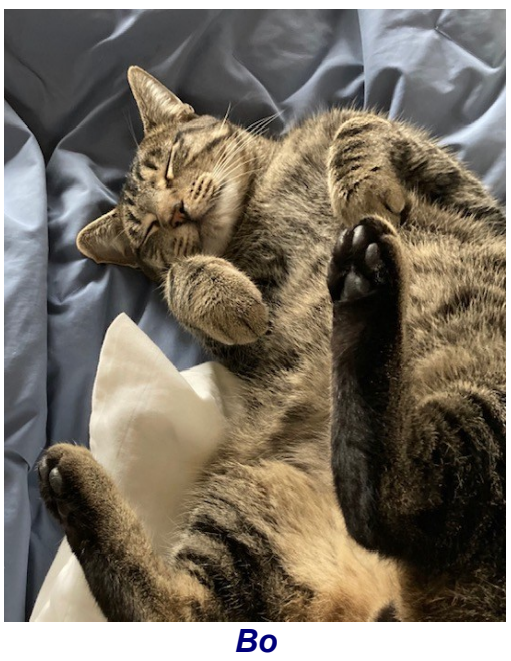

Tina Faye and Bo (originally called Tina and Turner) were originally adopted from us as kittens 'bout six years ago. They're a real bonded brother and sister, and there was no way they were gonna agree to be separated (not that PFOA ever would!) And they had a wonderful life in their new home, with a little terrier dog, until the sad day came when their people had to move and couldn't take Bo and Tina with them. Everyone was real broken up 'bout that, 'cause their people really loved their kitties.

These two tabbies will be seven years old next month. And they love being together, which is a good thing considered they've been together all their lives! They are quite adaptable and kinda "go with the flow" if you know what I mean. Flexible is their middle name ('cept for Tina—her middle name is Faye). Lots of times you'll find them piled together in a little ball.

Bo

They really love their catio time, 'specially now that the weather is turning nice.

Oh, one other thing 'bout both of them: they're pretty calm kitties. Nothing much bothers them; they just adjust to whatever situation they find themselves in. And they'll just go 'long with whatever their people want.

Bo loves to be held. If you're sitting on the couch, he'll just take a running leap, jump into your lap and start purring. Tina, on the other hand, kinda takes her lead from Bo, and she's not quite as outgoing as Bo, but once she gets to know someone, she sure enjoys gettin' pets.

Tina

Now if you're thinkin' these two kits sound too good to be true, think again! They're real grrreat cats, some of the nicest I've met here at Safe Haven. And the best way you're gonna really know that is to give us a call, make an appointment and come on down and meet them. I guarantee you're gonna be impressed!

And speaking of impressed, we were real happy with the turnout for our annual fundraiser event, A Truly Pawsome Night. From what I was told (I couldn't go 'cause it was past my bedtime, and besides, cats weren't invited … it's a bit too busy for us felines) it was a grrreat event. Sounds like everyone had a real good time, the venue was purrfect, and the food was grrreat. Which brings me to a sore spot: they had CHICKEN and I wasn't invited! Whatsup with that?

But I digress. I know everyone worked real hard to make this a huge success, and it benefitted us kitties. So y'all have my purrsonal thanks too!

Thanks for listening, p.s. We have a real urgent need at the shelter. It seems that we only have a few bags of dog and cat kibble left in our Emergency Pet Food Bank, and when we run out, we'll hafta start turning people away. Which we've never done before! I guess everyone's feeling the financial crunch, 'cause we've had more requests for kibble than we've ever had before. So if y'all were wondering how you can help, wonder no more. All bags of kibble, any brand, gratefully accepted! 5/20/2026
