WEEK 272: FINDING HIS PURRFECT HOME
NOTEWORTHY NEWS FROM WILLS

How you doin'?

Are y'all enjoying this grrreat weather we've been having lately? I know Jigs prob'ly is, 'cause last Saturday he left the building with his new family! We were all real pleased that this grrreat guy went home just in time to celebrate National Black Cat Appreciation Day, which is coming up on this Monday. He'll be missed by all his friends here. Have a super life, buddy!

And now I know you'd like to get to know the kit I'm gonna tell you 'bout this week, wouldn't-cha? Yep—I thought so.

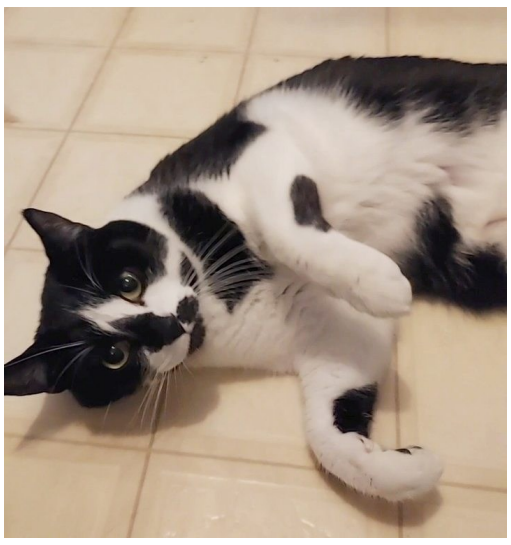

His name is Picasso, and he's a very handsome young black and white cat with real unusual markings. I hafta tell you, when you meet Picasso face to face, he's one cat you'll remember!

He's had way more changes in his short three-year life than any of us felines would want to go thru. He doesn't 'member much 'bout his early life, but he did tell us that he was just a little guy, 'bout four months old, when he was adopted by a nice older man. He had a pretty good life going for him, but his person crossed the bridge when Picasso was a few months short of three years old (in people years, of course.) So the person's nephew took Picasso home right away.

Only problem was, the nephew and his wife have a high-energy young child and Picasso thought she was his new playmate. And being a big, active, playful cat, he figured it was OK to play with her like he would with another cat. Which, as we all know, sometimes doesn't work too good. And 'cause they wanted the best for everyone, they made the decision to help Picasso find his own purrfect home—the one that will work best for him. So that's when he came to Safe Haven to find a home that was a little more to his liking.

And it didn't take long at all for a nice lady, who had already adopted from PFOA, to find out 'bout Picasso and arrange to meet him. And she really liked him and decided that he should come home with her and be a friend for her shy five-year-old female cat. But she quickly found out that Picasso, who is a very outgoing, strong-minded cat, didn't play with her other cat as well as she'd hoped. So Picasso came back to Safe Haven to try this adoption thing one more time!

This handsome boy is real energetic and playful, and is very affectionate toward people. We're real sure that Picasso will be happiest being the adored, special, only cat in a nice home with lots of adult attention and no kids. He's a cat who enjoys spending time with people, and who also really needs a little purrsonal space.

Are you intrigued? If so, give us a call, make an appointment and come on down to meet Picasso. I hafta say, he's quite a cat! And if after meeting him, y'all agree, there'll be a happy ending to Picasso's story!

Thanks for listening!

p.s. I bet y'all would like to know what we need at the shelter. And I know I've told you before 'bout how messy a buncha cats can be. So, once again, we need paper towels and bleach for cleaning up after us and keeping the shelter nice and sparkly clean!

p.p.s. A huge thank you to Studio Bob for hosting a fundraiser to support our rescue kitties! We're also grateful to IWANT, Studio Bob's very own improv troupe, for keeping everyone laughing, and to all the Drink & Draw participants and staff for their generous donations. Thank you for making it such a fun night while helping the cats at PFOA. We couldn't do what we do without you!
