FROM THE HOME FRONT
TALES OF THE SAFE HAVEN KITTIES
WEEK 273: LOTSA ORANGE KITS!
NOTEWORTHY NEWS FROM WILLS

How you doin'?

We had 'nuther good week at PFOA—three of our now-former residents left the building for their new furrever homes. First to leave were that grrreat pair of young orange and white tabbies, Colby Jack and Jango. Now, you'd think that, since they came in together and they're both orange and white, they're brothers. And you'd be partially right—they are brothers in spirit, but six months apart in age. And our newest adoption was just a couple days ago—we all waved bye-bye to our cute l'il Echo, who is just a little over a year old. And here's their photos:

Echo

Colby Jack and Jango

So now I betcha would like to know all 'bout our Cats of the Week, so I'm gonna tell you all 'bout them. These bonded brothers are just a little over a year old, and guess what? They're both orange and white! (I think we're on a roll here!) Isaac is the big brother, which makes Oliver the smaller of the two, and his orange is kinda light—staff is calling him "apricot and white."

Isaac

Oliver

Isaac and Oliver were left behind when their owners moved from a trailer park and didn't take the cats with them. The brothers were real lucky that a neighbor stepped in when they noticed that Isaac and Oliver weren't neutered and kept trying to invite themselves into people's homes. The neighbor brought them to Friends of Forks Animals, who got all their vet work done, and the boys are now at Safe Haven and ready for their purrfect new home together.

I hafta say these two are real affectionate lap cats. They love to lounge together, and are happiest when they are together, but they also like being with other cats. They really liked their roommate, Echo, and were kinda sad when he got adopted, but they're also quite reasonable kits and were happy that he got a grrreat furrever home.

So now it's their turn, and I'm real sure that the right people are gonna read this column, want to meet Isaac and Oliver and call us for a "meet 'n greet" appointment. And I know for sure that they'll be meeting a grrreat pair of young kits who'll be real happy to have their very own home with their very own people!

Thanks for listening!

Isaac

Oliver

Wills 🐾

p.s. August 29 (that's this coming Saturday) is "Jammin' in the Park" at Pebble Beach Park in Port Angeles, and PFOA will have a booth there. We'll have photos and information 'bout all of our adoptable kitties, plus grrreat merchandise hand crafted by our dedicated potholder team. So if you're in the area, look for our booth (you'll be able to spot our huge banner across the front of our tent) and stop by and say "howdy." I won't be there, but several of our grrreat staff and volunteers will be real happy to see you. And if you'd like to purchase a new pair of potholders, some microwave bowls or other very useful items, we'll have a very nice selection for you to choose from. Remember: it's for the kitties!

8/24/2026